

Dave on his boat off Princess Royal Island, British Columbia, Canada, summer 2011

David Jeschke

David has worked as an Information Technology Specialist at DNR since August, 2006. His primary areas of expertise are GIS databases, spatial analysis, and automation of GIS processes. He earned a Master of Geography degree from the University of Washington in March of 2000. He worked as a primary technical resource in a multi-year, high-visibility project to move the DNR from ArcInfo Workstation to ArcGIS. Since moving to DGER in October, 2011 David has been a key spatial database and automation expert for the division.