

STATE OF WASHINGTON
BOARD OF NATURAL RESOURCES
BERT L. COLE, Commissioner

Ghost Town References

Newspapers

Silverton--giving new spirit to a ghost town: The Seattle Times Pictorial Section, p. 16, 18, April 21, 1968.

1927 mine closing virtually ended Burnett--ghost town stigma difficult to erase, by J. E. Gatto: The Tacoma News Tribune and Sunday Ledger Magazine Section, p. 4, October 14, 1962.

Los Conquistadores remember Franklin: The Seattle Times Pictorial Section, p. 21, 23, 24, May 12, 1968.

Nuggets of Blewett's golden age still found today: The Tacoma News Tribune and Sunday Ledger, p. A-20, May 19, 1968.

Ghost towns in Washington: The Washington State Employee, p. 15, May 1968.

The ghost town of Monte Cristo ... at the foot of the "mountain of gold": Sunset, p. 18, 20, September 1960.

Gold! it built and killed towns overnight; Cascade ghost towns grim evidence of era: The Tacoma News Tribune and Sunday Ledger Magazine Section, p. 3, February 28, 1965.

East out of Kent to the Black Knights and Lavendar Town, by Rod Cardwell: The Tacoma News Tribune and Sunday Ledger, p. B-8, November 15, 1964.

Buried treasure tales rife in Northwest--lost gold legends numerous, by Ron Sanford: The Tacoma News Tribune and Sunday Ledger Magazine Section, p. 7, March 29, 1964.

Franklin--it's about as lost as it can get; there's not much left of the little mining community which was the center of a rip-roaring labor dispute: The Seattle Times Magazine Section, p. 10-11, September 3, 1961.

Old Blewett's mystery arrastra: The Seattle Times Pictorial Section, p. 16, 18, May 5, 1963.

Ravensdale--town heads for another coal 'spurt', by Lucile McDonald: The Seattle Times Magazine Section, p. 4, August 27, 1961.

Lost town of King County--busy Cedar Mountain of former years now is only a memory, by Lucile McDonald: The Seattle Times Magazine Section, p. 2, April 2, 1961.

On Washington's 'gold rush trail', by Carolyn Gilbaugh: The Seattle Times Pictorial Section, p. 4, 5, 7, June 18, 1961.

Coal mining, clay-products industry once made Taylor thrive, by Lucile McDonald: The Seattle Times Magazine Section, p. 10-11, May 7, 1961.

Monte Cristo, ghost mining town: The Seattle Times Pictorial Section, cover page, p. 2-5, January 23, 1955.

David Thompson sesqui-centennial August 23 at Crossroads: The Statesman Examiner, Colville, Wash., p. 6, August 2, 1957.

Still prospecting for gold--hopeful miners keep digging in Cascades: The Seattle Times Pictorial Section, cover page, p. 4-7, December 30, 1956.

Skagit County boom town dead for 25 years--but it's coming back to life--population 3, by Robert Browning: The Seattle Post-Intelligencer Pictorial Review, p. 17, March 22, 1959.

Geiger counters click at Republic as old mining center hopes to build future on uranium, by Lucile McDonald: The Seattle Times Magazine Section, p. 2, September 8, 1957.

Its population has dwindled, but there still is life around Chesaw, old mine town named for Chinese, by Lucile McDonald: The Seattle Times Magazine Section, cover page, p. 2, November 27, 1960.

Once a busy fishing center, now a log dump--death of a ghost town, by Ray Fadich: The Seattle Times Pictorial Section, p. 14-15, February 10, 1957.

Looking for a ghost town?--here are several, by Lucile McDonald: The Seattle Times Pictorial Section, p. 22-26, September 25, 1955.

Near Harts Pass--long search leads to riches in glory hole: The Wenatchee Daily World, p. 11, July 6, 1961.

At Harts Pass--rotting cabins remain of rowdy mining town, by Hu Blonk: The Wenatchee Daily World, p. 8, July 9, 1961.

Bayne's once vital life is buried in time--boom town of coal now lies in soot, by Marty Loken: The Seattle Times, p. A, 45, December 17, 1967.

The Madre D'Oro; a journal devoted to the mining industries of the Okanogan Country, Oro, Okanogan County, Wash. (Souvenir copy of the first newspaper published in Oroville, Washington. Original owned by L. C. Stansbury. Photographed and printed by the Oroville Gazette, February 1958): 8 p., August 27, 1892.

Mountain ghost town site changing to church retreat: The Daily Olympian, August 4, 1961.

Buckskin map in jar reveals mining history, by Mabel Gavin: The Wenatchee Daily World, November 20, 1963.

Books

A broad bold ledge of gold; historical facts of Monte Cristo, Washington, by Rosemary Wilkie: Seattle Printing and Publishing Co., 55 p., 1958.

Bonanza trail; ghost towns and mining camps of the West, by Muriel Wolle: Univ. of Indiana Press, Bloomington, Indiana, 510 p., 1953.

Mining in the Pacific Northwest, by L. K. Hodges: The Seattle Post-Intelligencer, 192 p., 1897.

The mining advance into the Inland Empire, by William J. Trimble: Univ. of Wisconsin Bulletin 638 (History Series, vol. 3, no. 2), 254 p., 1914.

Ghost town album, by Lambert Florin: Superior Publishing Co., Seattle, Wash., 184 p., 1965. (Has a few pages devoted to Washington ghost towns).

A guide to western ghost towns, by Lambert Florin: Superior Publishing Co., Seattle, Wash., 96 p., 1967.

Western ghost towns, by Lambert Florin: Superior Publishing Co., Seattle, Wash., 176 p., 1961.